HONORARY DOCTOR

Honoris causa, abbreviated as h.c., is a Latin phrase (in Portuguese: "because of honor") used in honorary degrees awarded by universities to eminent persons, who do not necessarily hold a university degree but who have excelled in a certain area. (arts, sciences, philosophy, letters, promotion of peace, humanitarian causes, etc.), for their good reputation, virtue, merit or service actions that transcend families, people or institutions.

Historically, an honorary doctor (or doctor honoris causa) received the same treatment and privileges as those who obtained an academic doctorate in the conventional way - unless otherwise specified.
